Scientific Interests and Skills

- Basic research: Immunoenzymatic studies on autoimmune blistering dermatoses, research activity partially funded by the EX-60% Funds of the University of Cagliari - Year 2007 (subject to publication) - Direct participation in the research of HHV-8 in Italy, on serum, promoted by the Istituto Superiore della Sanità and coordinated for Sardinia by the Dermatology Clinic of the University of Sassari – Year 2001-02 (subject to publication).
- Adverse Cutaneous Reactions to Drugs: from systematic collection and analysis of clinical-epidemiological data to strengthening initiatives at the national and international level, with participation in observational, descriptive, and prevalence studies carried out in collaboration with the Italian Group for Epidemiological Studies in Dermatology (GISED), the international register of severe cutaneous ADRs (RegiSCAR project) supported by the European Union (contract no. QL1-CT-2002-01738), and the Jean Dausset Foundation in Paris for the study of genetic polymorphisms. The results of the overall research activity and specific categories of drugs, as well as clinically significant cases, have been the subject of national and international scientific publication.

- Dermatological Oncology: conducting clinical-epidemiological studies on melanocytic and non-melanocytic skin tumors, including rare tumors. Use of videodermoscopy, a non-invasive diagnostic method representing one of the main innovations in the field of pigmented lesions and melanoma in particular. A dedicated care clinic for this diagnostic method is focused on screening and monitoring of moles, equipped with an exclusive electronic booking agenda.
- Psoriasis Center: in addition to routine care activities, systematic collection and analysis of data related to patients followed since 1991 by the clinic dedicated to the most common inflammatory skin pathology in the Caucasian population, the subject of both spontaneous and multicentric studies with international relevance. Coordination and organizational activities aimed at quality accreditation of the center ISO 9001-2015.
- Collaboration with the Department of Geoengineering and Environmental Technologies (DIGITA) of the Faculty of Engineering - University of Cagliari for the understanding and definition of relationships with the geological environment, both natural and modified by humans, for the identification of potential environmental risk signals.
- Collaboration on research activities with the University of Sassari, from September 1 to November 30, 2001, as part of Objective 3 - international agreements on epidemiological and clinical investigation, with blood sample collection for the study of HHV-8 infection spread, promoted by the Istituto Superiore di Sanità. Some results of the study have been published.
- Appendage diseases: Alopecia, Acne, and Suppurative Hidradenitis. Participation in epidemiological studies and clinical trials, subject to publication. A dedicated clinic for these conditions called "dermocosmetics," with an exclusive electronic booking agenda.
- Additional fields of interest include cutaneous infectious pathology, particularly from fungi, bacterial infections, and parasitic infections, the subject of numerous scientific publications.
- Other specific fields of expertise: rare diseases, inflammatory skin diseases including psoriasis and connective tissue diseases, the subject of numerous scientific publications."
